1. What is a garnishment protection account (P-account)?

A garnishment protection account does not protect the respective account holder from garnishment. Only particular credit balances and/or incoming payments may (after a check) be put at the account holder's disposal by the financial institution in question. In the process, the debtor enjoys automatic protection from garnishment, irrespective of the type of credit entries, up to the amount of a basic allowance. For the account holder, this sum is currently:

- a. with 0 maintenance obligation 1,073.88 €
- b. with 1 maintenance obligation 1,478.04 € (a) + 404.16 € plus child benefit
- c. with 2 maintenance obligations 1,703.21 € (b) + 225.17 € plus child benefit
(+ 225.17 € for each further maintenance obligation plus child benefit)

Up to these basic allowances, the debtor can avail himself of his account freely and fully without a court ruling!

2. Who can apply for a P-account?

Any natural person can apply to a financial institution for only one P-account only for himself alone.

3. If

If the debtor in question already has a normal account, this person is entitled to have that account converted into a P-account at any time. This also applies if the account is already garnished. In such cases, the account can be converted for a maximum of four weeks retroactively to the date on which the garnishment was served.

4. Increase in the allowance

Wirecard Bank AG can consent only to the basic allowance of EUR 1,073.88 automatically for availment in the garnishment protection account. To have the allowance increased, the customer must prove by means of certification from the employer, the welfare benefit agency's family welfare fund or a suitable person or agency as defined in Section 305 para. (1) of the German Insolvency Code (InsO) that the credit balance is not covered by the garnishment (Section 850 k para. 5 ZPO¹).

Proof is, for example:

- a filled-out and stamped certificate in accordance with Section 850 k para. 5 ZPO¹ (sample enclosed)
- certification from the employer
- current child benefit notification as original copy
- full copy of current ARGE or pension notification

Please note that these certifications should not be older than three months. Although there is no time limitation for these certifications, the financial institution can order more of them at any time.
